Spectacular Action As Carrier Sinks 10 Subs

Sinking of 10 out of 11 Nazi subs credited to one of the U. S. Navy's new "baby flat-tops" identified only as "Carrier B". The record bag of U-boats was scored in action over a few days while the carrier was escorting a convoy in the Atlantic. These spectacular pictures were taken during the attacks on the subs by the carrier's Grumman Avenger torpedo-bombers. Nazi sailors on the deck and conning tower of one of the U-boats duck, top, as a huge geyser of water shoots up alongside the craft and a second charge is about to hit the water. Strafing and depth bombing are combined in the attack on the sub shown in lower photo. Shells explode on one side of the sub while a depth charge explodes on the other. U. S. The War Today...

DIVERS elements go to make up the victory which the United Nations are forging from white-hot steel, and the masterful manner in which the Sicilian stronghold has been invaded emphasizes again that unprecedentedly unselfish Allied cooperation is the ranking reason for success.

Now please don't start writing to tell me of war theaters where Americans and British look down their noses at each other. I know about that from first-hand observation, and think it's too bad. But those cases seem to me to be exceptions to the rule, although I'm not so naive as to think all the spots of bother between our two countries have been rubbed out.

Taking it by and large, there exists between the Allies a cordiality—and in many cases a real com-

REDS MENACE GERMAN LINES

New Nazi Divisions Seek to Check Soviet Advance in Orel Sector

(By Associated Press)
MOSCOW, July 17.—The German high command has thrown two new divisions, one armored and one infantry, against the Russian spearhead now threatening Orel, front dispatches said today, but the Red army was reported repulsing all Nazi thrusts and continuing to advance.

One wing of the Red army's smashing counter attack was reported to have rolled to within 25 miles of the heavily fortified Nazi base as the Germans frantically rallied all available manpower and equipment in a desperate effort to stave off a major breakthrough.

Dispatches reported that the northern column of the Russian counter-offensive against Orel was advancing southward and had progressed another six to ten miles after overcoming 11 heavy German counter-attacks.

This would put the Russians anywhere from about 27 to 31 miles north of Orel since originally this column reached to a point about 37 miles north of Orel, dispatches indicated.

There is no indication of the present location of the other Russian column advancing on Orel from the east. Its original advance put it to within about 25 miles of Orel, dispatches indicated.

Southward along the Orel-Kursk-Belgorod bulge, against which the nazis hurled a heavy offensive 12 days ago, fighting now has died down to scouting operations.

The war bulletin gave the day's bag as 129 German tanks and 76 planes, raising the 12-day total to 3,181 tanks and 1,762 planes. German losses in personnel also continued to mount, the communiques said, listing the total of 62,000.

The Nazi high command was reported using all its available motor transport to rush reserves to the threatened front.

There was every indication from the Russian communiques that the Red army had bitten deeply into German defenses. Orel is an important strategic point.

82 Tons of Bombs Dropped On Munda

(By Associated Press)
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, July 17.—Munda is being dive-bombed to destruction.

Eighty-two more tons of bombs burst Friday upon the Japanese air base whose defenders, from their fox holes, have seen the Central Solomon's skies darkened by countless dive bombers and Avenger torpedo bombers from the first day of the American invasion on June 30.

More than 100 of these planes delivered the heaviest of these low level pick-your-target attacks which in a short while have exploded in excess of 300 tons of bombs on Munda.

The Lamberti plantation positions of the Japanese, two miles east of the airfield and the air field itself were yesterday's targets. The communiques made no further reference to United States jungle fighters who have been closing in on Munda. Heavy rains swept the fighting sector.

Former Salem Woman Is Child-Care Center Head

Mrs. Velma Tatu of Akron, formerly of Salem, is supervisor of a recreational club, the Teen-Agers, formed recently by high school girls associated with the Akron Cole Avenue housing project. The club was organized in accordance with the city child-care program and campaign against juvenile delinquency in the war center.

During the summer months the girls are carrying on a program of outdoor activities and for the winter months Mrs. Tatu, chosen as supervisor by the parents' group, has arranged a dramatics course and plans to present plays during the holidays.

TOO LATE NOW TO TURN BACK, ITALIANS SAY

Rome Radio Makes First Direct Reply To Allied Surrender Demand

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, July 17.—In the first direct reply to the Roosevelt-Churchill surrender demand, the Rome radio intimated today that Italy had strung along with Adolf Hitler too long to turn back now.

"Even if Italy surrendered," it said, it would not mean she would have found peace once again. If, as the British and Americans say, their goal is Berlin, their way to it is Italy.

"The Italian people would still be in the war; they would be asked by the invaders to turn their weapons against Germany.

"Italians know full well that for them this war is one of life or death."

Planes Drop Surrender Leaflets
The broadcast came soon after the Italian high command communique had announced that Allied planes flew over Rome last night and dropped leaflets.

Presumably the leaflets contained the Churchill-Roosevelt proclamation issued yesterday demanding that Italians capitulate or suffer the consequences.

Without mentioning the radio barrages which are spreading the Roosevelt-Churchill ultimatum all over Italy, Fascist propagandists hastily marshalled arguments today against an Italian capitulation.

Neither Italian radio nor newspapers picked up the Allied appeal but the Italian newspaper Corriere Della Sera was quoted in a Berlin broadcast as saying that "capitulation would only bring us shameful peace and more fighting, destruction and suffering."

The official Italian news agency Stefani was quoted in the London Morning Press as saying that "if Britain and the United States want to defeat Italy they must defeat her with weapons in their hands and pay the price."

Dispatches from Bern to the London Daily Express said Italian press and spokesmen were bitterly remarking on the scantiness of German forces in Italy and calling for aid.

Pattern For Sicilian Invasion Expected To Work Elsewhere

By JAMES M. LONG
LONDON, July 17.—The imminent prospect of a clean-cut victory in Sicily has confirmed the Allied formula for an amphibious assault on western Europe and suggests strong support for the view of some observers that the same pattern will work against Adolf Hitler's Atlantic wall of western France.

There is no intention to imply, these sources pointed out, that the Germans are relying on mere scarecrow defenses. However, reports from the Mediterranean front of surprisingly low Allied casualties and rapid progress throw a clearer light on the Nazi theme of impregnability.

The ascendancy of Allied air power leaves little doubt, it was said, that the RAF and the Eighth U. S. Air force will be able to lay down the same ruinous preliminary bombardment and maintain the same efficient umbrella over an Allied landing on the French coast as over Italy's sorely-tubed Sicilian toe.

Great Battle With Nazis Is Expected

BY BELMAN MORIN

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 17.—Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's great desert army was believed to be approaching the outskirts of Catania today after smashing back the Hermann Goering and elements of the 15th German armored divisions in the biggest battle yet fought for Sicily.

Going forward with a powerful Allied war fleet on his seaward flank gunning the enemy's positions, Montgomery has captured both Lentini and Scordia, at the entrance to the Catania plain. Allied headquarters announced, while on all other parts of the Allied front the advance continued.

Lentini is about 15 miles below Catania, the prize seaport and air base half way up the east Sicilian coast, and Scordia is nine miles inland from Lentini.

Rounding out the capture of four more towns by the Allies, the Canadians took Caltagirone, 20 miles inland from the American bridgehead at Gela, and Grammichele, six miles to the east.

With French goumiers, fierce knife and tommy gun wielding warriors from the Moroccan hills on their left flank, the Americans of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., were believed to have emerged from the hilly ground that ringed their beachheads and to have penetrated inland for perhaps 30 miles.

The new surge gave the Allies possession of a lateral east-west highway and a valley running east-west which will greatly facilitate the task of maintaining unbroken communications with the British Eighth army.

(The London Daily Express said American and Canadian troops also were pouring onto the Catania plain from the Vizzini area, joining hands with Montgomery for a push on Catania, key Sicilian port and air base midway up the east coast.

(The Algiers radio said the British were attacking the outer defenses of Catania itself.

(Some observers estimated one-eighth of the area of Sicily was in Allied hands.)

As the end of a week's lightning campaign, the Allied armies were thus firmly established at bridgeheads all along the southeast coast and in control of two of the most strategically important roads in the area.

Targets on the mainland side of the ferry route across the strait shuddered under one of the Northwest African Air force's all-out assaults yesterday.

Vibo Valentia, Reggio Calabria, San Giovanni and Crotona on the Gulf of Taranto were pounded in these attacks, while the Middle East force of Liberators pummeled Bari on the upper part of the Italian heel.

Americans Continue Sweep Northward

In the south-central sector, the American seventh army under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., continued its steady sweep northward across difficult hill country to exploit its hold on supply and communication routes linking the eastern and western sections of the island.

The Americans were credited with nearly 16,000 of the 20,000 total of Axis prisoners taken by the Allies since the start of the invasion. The U. S. troops also subdued six of the 12 additional towns listed in yesterday's communiques as captured.

The communiques also said the Americans inflicted "severe losses" upon the enemy and captured further important positions in their inland drives from Licata and Gela.

(A Vichy broadcast said the Americans had stormed into Agrigento, important Axis troop center about 25 miles northwest of Licata.)

Almost all the German defenders of Sicily were reported massing on the Catania plain, which lies across the Eighth army's northward drive to Catina and Messina and extends west to Gerbini, around which the Axis still holds eight satellite airports.

The Eighth army encountered units of the crack Hermann Goering armored division north of Lentini yesterday and hurled it back, although the Nazis, unsupported by their units, were reported to have fought doggedly. The 15th German armored division, said to be a collection of units originally destined for Tunisia, was reported held in reserve on the plain.

Observers were confident the Allied tank strength was sufficient to overcome any opposition.

Other observers emphasized the developing battle as the hardest the Allies likely will face in Sicily because the opposition will be mostly German.

Indicative of the slump in Italian morale were reports that some Italian soldiers were donning civilian clothes and returning to their homes. Young men have been seen frequently in Sicilian towns dressed in civilian clothes but wearing army boots.

As the ground conflicts grew in intensity, Allied airmen were roving with increasing freedom over Sicily and the Italian mainland.

Messina, chief Sicilian port of entry for reinforcements and supplies from the mainland, was believed to have been knocked out by Allied bombers which gouged out a strip two miles wide and a mile long from the heart of its harbor section.

Naples, Italy's chief mainland port and famed for its beauty, was turned into a blazing inferno Thursday by thousands of explosives and incendiaries from flying fortresses which shattered the Royal armory and gutted acres of harbors and industrial installations. The daylight blow fell while fires were still blazing from a night attack by RAF bombers.

The German air force was reported making virtually no attempt to protect Italian towns from this overwhelming onslaught.

Sergt. C. Ray Carter, Prisoner of Nazis, Writes to Parents

A postcard carrying German postmarks, written more than four months ago by Sergt. Charles Ray Carter, has reached his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Carter of the Benton rd.

Sergt. Carter, officially reported missing in action in North Africa Feb. 14, later was learned to have been captured.

Sergt. Carter wrote to his family March 12, telling them he was "well and happy" and asking for pictures from home—and the postcard, bearing the postmark of Stalag, Germany, was received here Wednesday. The card, which came through the Swiss Red Cross, told his parents that the Red Cross would let them know what he needed and what they could send him.

"Ray", who has been in service three years, trained with the First Armored division at Fort Knox, Ky., and was sent overseas with his unit in June, 1942. Sent to Ireland, then to England, he later reached Africa on Christmas day, 1942.

His family here had their last letter from him on Feb. 10, four days before he was reported missing. The next word came in a postcard written Feb. 26, informing them that he was in a "transit camp in Italy, bound for Germany."

OWNERS HAVE RIGHTS, TOO

Mine owners' demands for a clear decision on their rights in the dispute that now lies between United Mine Workers and the government have been answered by President Roosevelt's promise that their property will be returned under the provisions of the anti-strike law.

The law provides that plants taken over by the government shall be restored to private hands as soon as practicable and in no case later than 60 days after "productive efficiency" has been restored. Mr. Roosevelt does not attempt to predict when this condition will be satisfied. The possibility that John L. Lewis might see to it that "productive efficiency" can't be restored, unless his terms are met, must be taken into account.

The chief effect of Mr. Roosevelt's assurance that return of the mines to their owners is contemplated is to remove the growing doubt about the rights of ownership in labor disputes. Those rights have not been shelved for the duration. In correspondence made public on July 10, mine owners pointed out to James P. Byrnes, director of war mobilization, that they felt it might have been wiser, in view of what had happened, for them to make a contract with United Mine Workers in defiance of the stabilization program. At least, they would not have been deprived of control of their property, whereas by co-operating with the government they lost their mines. The point was well taken, and appears to have been well answered by Mr. Roosevelt, within the limitations of his administration's other commitments.

WILL THE HAND BE QUICKER?

The President's promise to make a legal issue of the legislative procedure ousting three federal employees by specifying that they must be dropped from the payroll not later than Nov. 13 unless meanwhile they are renominated and confirmed by the senate, is a threat to confuse the real issue.

The real issue is whether the chief executive may bring into the rapidly growing executive personnel individuals of his own choosing and keep them there indefinitely against the wishes of the legislature. The procedure by which three men suspected of holding beliefs inimical to the Constitution of the United States have been challenged is an experiment—a test case. Mr. Roosevelt's intention to resist the challenge by the legal means of charging congress with a bill of attainder contrary to the Constitution is likewise a test case. This is a contest between the executive and legislative branches to determine which holds final authority over members of the mushrooming bureaucracy, referred to sometimes as the "fourth branch" of government.

The question is whether the public can be misled by a legalistic approach, or whether it will follow the argument with full awareness of what is entailed. Congress may have been wrong in the means it employed, but congress is not wrong when it insists on retaining the right to exercise some authority over jobholders for whom it must take responsibility.

HOE, BROTHER, HOE!

War food administration's canned food allocations for the next 12 months, coupled with buyers' actual experiences in obtaining food, revised crop reports and the certainty that the drain on the American supply will not be less than anticipated and probably will be more, gives Victory Gardening new mid-season impetus. For every family struggling with a garden, success or failure will be felt in the quality, quantity and cost of day-to-day eating during the coming year.

WFA's admission that inflated incomes will be in sharp competition for the food supply makes Victory Gardening particularly important for families whose incomes have not been inflated. Their only security against the soaring prices of commodities not being controlled is what they can raise by their own efforts.

It is impossible to know what the total harvest from Victory Gardening is going to be. Virtually every factor affecting the productivity of amateur gardeners is uncertain, except one—their own efforts to make the most of what they have planted. Anyone making the mistake of neglecting his garden now, in the light of reduced allocations of canned fruits and vegetables, is making the mistake of ignoring his own welfare.

The hoe and cultivator are symbolic instruments of national welfare for the duration.

IT MIGHT BE OPA

We do not know who is to blame for Lou R. Maxon's resignation from and parting blast at OPA. Perhaps it is the newspapers, again.

Or it might be congress, which is the alternative goat when the Roosevelt administration is laying the blame for things that go wrong.

It might be Republicans. As 1944 and the fourth term try come closer, a lot of things that go wrong in the New Deal are blamed on Republicans.

It might be Mr. Maxon's Sunday school and public school teachers when he was a little boy growing up. Perhaps they didn't prepare him properly for what he ran into as deputy administrator of OPA.

It might be the fact that Mr. Maxon is associated closely with the realities of things as they are and is, therefore, more concerned with making them work than with their destruction, which is what he thinks too many of the OPA colytes are thinking about.

Or it might be that OPA needs a thorough housecleaning to do the job it was set up to do, a possibility that has been mentioned a good many thousands of times recently, with no results.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, July 18

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds indications of splendid success in several avenues that may be novel or unique. The talents, faculties and forces are keyed to spectacular achievement of unpredictable climax. However, this excellent prospect may be negated by a tendency to excesses, extravagances, impetuosity and turbulence. This is magnified in personal or intimate relationships. Be calm.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a grand opportunity for distinguishing themselves in some sort of novel or unique achievement of outstanding significance, possibly to shine in the public eye. All creative forces and faculties may be stimulated and pitched to great progress. At the same time the emotions, impulses and desires are likewise under impetus, and may prove decisively detrimental. This may react upon domestic and affectional or social harmony to the point of regrettable strife and disruption. In all affairs be restrained.

A child born on this day may be possessed of excellent creative abilities of an inventive, intellectual and scientific nature, which should assure success. But intemperance and extravagant inclinations should be rigidly suppressed, lest there be failure and disruption.

For Monday, July 19

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a most important one, judging by the lunar transits. The mind may be profound, serious and concentrated, and the energies mobilized to tackle major objectives or projects with industry determination and continuity, until desired aims are achieved. Elders or superiors may recognize and reward this stability, perhaps to the point of legacy. Work for security, lasting merit and responsibility.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of decisive and enduring effort in the direction of attaining sound and established objectives or purposes. This by concentrated energies and faculties, with industry, diligence and perseverance, probably winning rich rewards from superiors or elders.

A child born on this day may have much sound ability and sterling character assuring success with definite and substantial progress in life. It may inherit or find other good gifts.

A BAD DAY FOR TYRANNY

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Balanced Diet For Worker Essential

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
CERTAINLY a great deal of the success of our war effort depends upon keeping the industrial worker in the highest degree of efficiency.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

efficiency, and certainly the highest degree of efficiency depends primarily upon his food and nutrition.

Studies are being made by trained nutritionists of the quality of industrial workers' food all over the country. The meals which are furnished by the factory itself are usually well-balanced from the nutritional standpoint. The foods sold in a company canteen are not necessarily so, especially if the selection is left to the workers' taste and appetite. For instance, signs reading "Candy bars sold throughout the plant are a definite aid to the health and efficiency of our employees," and "Employees' nourishment afforded by candy dispensed through canteens" are not statements with which scientific nutritionists can agree.

Candy, pastry and soft drinks have a very limited nutritional value. It is perhaps true that candy lessens fatigue, but only for a short while and it may take away appetite for more nutritious or wholesome foods.

A Good Lunch Menu

A dinner pail or lunch box prepared at home provided by local merchants supplies the great majority of industrial workers with their lunches. Restaurants, lunch wagons, refreshment stands, and automatic feeding machines also play a large part.

A rough formula for evaluating lunches is the following:

A good lunch includes all three of the following items: milk, fruit or vegetable and a main dish—meat or fish.

Fair is lacking one of these three items.

Poor is lacking two or all three items.

A survey of dietary conditions in industry showed that only 10 to 25 per cent of the employees of 33 large plants consumed milk. There is no reason to doubt that this estimate applies to industry as a whole.

In most plant cafeterias a "daily special" is served for 25 to 30 cents. Most of the employees select this daily special. Estimating the ingredients alone, it would appear that most of these daily specials are of a high nutritive value, but in the preparation—through cooking, pouring off water and fluids that have accumulated in cooking, and with the food standing for hours—a considerable amount of vitamin content may be lost.

Carefully Selected Meal

A carefully selected meal consisting of tomato juice, meat, potatoes, carrots, whole-wheat bread, butter, milk and a custard pudding can be prepared so that there is little loss of vitamin content, but it is estimated that this would cost 50 cents rather than 30 cents.

These findings, which I emphasize again were made by extremely careful nutrition experts, would indicate that industrial plants could profitably exercise more care in the supervision of the diet which their workers eat. There is no question that if improvement occurs in time diet, it will also bring about improvement in the efficiency of the worker.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. H.: What disease causes palpitation of the heart, smothering and choking after meals? Will x-ray pictures and other examinations show when gallstones are present in every case?

Answer: Palpitation of the heart is almost always a nervous affection, is not of any serious import. The diagnosis of gallstones is still only fairly satisfactory. The two questions of whether gallstones are present, or whether there are no gallstones can be answered only in about 75 per cent of instances by x-ray.

T. Y.: What is hemato-porphyrinuria of the liver?

Answer: Porphyrin is an organic crystal which sometimes accumulates in the bile in such quantities as to cause a colic, resembling gallstones. It is also excreted in the urine, turning the urine red after exposure to light.

T. A. H.: Can an inflamed diverticulum be cured without an operation? What foods may be eaten?

Answer: I presume you mean a diverticulum of the sigmoid or lower portion of the bowel. Many of them get well without operation. Bismuth sulphate suspension enemas are valuable in clearing them up. Bland, semi-solid, pureed, non-roughage foods are indicated.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

For Servicemen's Good

LOS ANGELES, Cal. — The Police Department has decided to keep Uncle Sam's armed forces as intact as possible until they are actually facing the enemy. Heretofore, the department has hesitated moving in on the armed forces for jaywalking but the department has decided that the policy of non-interference is too lethal.

SHE WANTS TO WIN AN UNPOPULARITY CONTEST

Elizabeth Jenkins Seeks Title of

"Most hated by Axis in 1943!"

THE AXIS has probably never heard of Miss Elizabeth Jenkins—but she's doing her level best to change that!

Elizabeth works in an essential industry thereby releasing, in effect, a fighting man. And out of the salary she gets for her work she puts 22% into War Bonds, through the Payroll Savings Plan. She figures that her investment may help to maintain the three fighting men who are closest to her—her two brothers and her father.

"They're fighting for me, and I'm helping to buy their fighting tools!" says Elizabeth.

Her father commands a brigade of the North Carolina State Guard. He saw action overseas in the last war and his stories have made Elizabeth keenly aware of the importance of her investment in War Bonds. He has explained that no matter how much spirit and fight a soldier has, he needs the best equipment money can buy. He has also pointed out that American soldiers are the best equipped in the world.

Miss Jenkins wants to keep them that way, because in addition to her father, she has two brothers in the Army.

Lieutenant Tom is an anti-aircraft artilleryman. Captain Jack is in the Air Corps. So Elizabeth is reasonably sure that in one way or another, the Axis will hear from the Jenkins family in the near future!

Are you doing as much for America's future as Elizabeth Jenkins? Every dollar you can lend helps, so . . .

Mrs. L. E. Beery, president of the federation, presided during the program.

Johnny Comes Marching Home To Join the Army

CINCINNATI, July 17. — This Johnny came marching home from the African war front to join the army.

John L. Probert, 30, of Cincinnati was in North Africa serving as an assistant secretary to Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark, when his Cincinnati draft board notified him he had been placed in 1-A.

Probert went to Africa early in 1942 for the Douglas Aircraft Co. and was assigned to General Clark after the invasion.

Last March the selective service summons caught up with Probert at a Red sea port and he came home aboard a prison ship. He has been sent to the U. S. Army railway training center, New Orleans, La.

Dairy Production Slump Stressed by Federation

CHICAGO, July 17.—The nation's dairy production is declining and a shortage of milk supplies impends, the National Cooperative Milk Producers' federation said today, declaring the administration's wartime program "has been creating scarcity rather than abundance of dairy products."

The federation's board of directors yesterday in a resolution declared centralized government price control and subsidy policies "are destroying the national balance and normal function of economic forces."

Brown Cites Downward Trend In Living Costs

BOSTON, July 17.—Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown declared today that the OPA recently had started a downward trend in living costs for the first time and that it would battle to reduce the cost of living "until our objective is won."

"You have already seen reductions in the price of meats and butter and you will see other reductions in the near future," he told the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Potato Shipment Spoils

TOLEDO, July 17.—Approximately 30,000 pounds of potatoes shipped into the Toledo area are rotting and must be thrown away, H. J. Nehrig, proprietor of the largest potato distributing firm in this city, said today. The amount represents 25 per cent of total shipments. Nehrig blamed bad packing, ODT's ban on icing, and slow transportation for the loss.

STIMSON GIVES TOP U. S. AWARD

CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR goes to its second recipient in the European theater, Sgt. Maynard H. Smith, 32, of Caro, Mich., who is credited with saving the lives of six fellow members of his Flying Fortress crew when the plane caught fire during a raid on St. Nazaire. Smith beat out the flames single-handed, manned two machine gun posts and administered first aid. Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson is pictured hanging the decoration around the sergeant's neck at an airfield in England. (International Radiophoto)

Ration Books Held Up By Shortage of Volunteer Workers

(By Associated Press) COLUMBUS, July 17.—A shortage of volunteer workers has made it impossible to complete mailing of War Ration Book No. 3 to Ohioans by the July 21 deadline set by Office of Price Administration, D. P. Branson, executive director of the Franklin County Civilian Defense council, asserted today.

At least 2,000,000 of the state's 7,500,000 books still must be processed at state mailing headquarters here, making it doubtful whether some Ohioans will receive theirs before July 28, said Branson, who is in charge of recruiting volunteers.

He added that he did not know when the new coupons would become valid.

"Some folks just don't know there's a war going on," he asserted in commenting on the lack of volunteers. "Every Ohioan should be concerned vitally about getting his book."

Branson estimated between 600,000 and 700,000 man-hours would be spent in mailing books in Ohio.

"If everyone had pitched in and helped a few hours as did our regulars there would be no necessity for prolonging the job past the deadline," he declared. "We have more than 100 persons who have spent over 50 hours at the mailing center, some have worked a part of each day since June 7 when the mailing began."

"If we can just get a few hundred more volunteers a day to help, we still may be able to finish mailing the books before the end of the month," Branson said.

He added that no books had been mailed in the Columbus area.

11 a. m. Morning worship; sermon topic, "Building a Better World."

"If the conviction became general possession, that God was disinterested in the affairs of this world, there would be a wave of pessimism sweep over the whole human race. There are some people who believe that God is no more interested in the doings of this earth than the moon is concerned about the existence of human life. It is well that such thoughts are not in predominance. This present conflict has revealed the inner thoughts and private religious practices of numerous people who might have been pictured as unbelievers or at least as indifferent Christians. The presence of God is an assured fact. It is an experienced fact. It is possible for sincere religious people to discover the resources of God for power and encouragement in daily living. "Never you mind, never you fret. God is not through with this old world yet." It is true that numerous people have forgotten God, but God has not forgotten this world nor His people. The highest type of encouragement is the truth and experienced fact that God is present with us, and that He will open to us the resources of His strength and power."—Rev. Keister.

AMERICAN BRED by FRANKEN MELONEY

SYNOPSIS

There was no threat of stormy weather when pretty Ann Rivers left her married sister's swank home in Bar Harbor, Maine. But on a lonely road outside Providence, she ran into a sleet storm—and a ditch—from which her car refused to budge. At the Tru-Frend Tourist Bungalow, where she sought help, the brusque young proprietor informs her the telephone is out of order. Paul Freund's blind mother, a kindly old lady, suggests that Ann take one of the bunks for the night. Sitting before the Friends' kitchen fire, Ann recalls her imperious sister Helen's disapproval of her plans to seek employment in New York and, if possible, locate a buyer for Broadfields, the large farm in Connecticut left Ann by her late father. Mrs. Freund explains that Paul's wife, Carol, is expecting a baby. Ann visits with Carol while Paul is having his dinner and later, as she waits for her cabin, elderly Mrs. Freund expresses the hope that Ann will not mind sharing it with Rosalinda. Ann could not understand why Rosalinda, who proved to be a beautiful Great Dane, was housed with her companions in the kennels outside. But the reason was soon obvious when Rosalinda's nine new puppies arrived. Returning to the main house for milk for Rosalinda, Ann is pressed into service by the local doctor in Carol's behalf. Totally inexperienced in such matters, her help, nevertheless, enabled him to save Carol and her new baby. Next morning, Ann's well-earned rest was disturbed when Christopher Wain drew up in a jalopy to see Paul about buying a puppy. Paul is still sleeping, so Ann pilots the good-looking young man out to the kennels. From him she learns that the Friends, who for generations have bred and raised Great Danes, hope that one day Rosalinda will produce the first American bred champion. Ann endeavors to help Christopher select his puppy, but he belligerently chooses and decides on another, promising to call back for it later. Watching him drive off in his rattle-trap car, Ann decided he was an overbearing, impetuous kennel man. Later, when Paul learns of Christopher's visit, he hasn't the heart to tell her how wrong her judgment was and that the very wealthy Mr. Wain, who heretofore had imported all his champion stock, was the one person to whom he was most anxious to sell an American bred puppy.

CHAPTER NINE

They met Ann at the foot of the stairs. "Look, Ann, Mom and I would like to know which dog Wain picked out."

"I don't know their names, but I could show you the ones," said Ann at the kennels, she pointed to Wain's choice. "That's Gretel," said Paul. "He picked the best one all right."

"Yah," said the old lady. "Gretel is a good puppy."

Ann remarked casually, "I'd have chosen that one over there instead."

"Which?"

"The one looking toward us—"

"You mean the faun with the black mask? That's Rowena. Nice pup, but she's the runt of the lot."

Ann knelt before Rowena and said, "She's perfect!"

"I like her anyway. She's got something about her—"

"Lady, she's yours," declared Paul. "Just a small token of our appreciation."

Ann laughed.

"No! I mean it," he insisted seriously. "After what you did for us last night, I wish I could do a lot more than just give you a pup."

Ann was touched. From what Christopher Wain had told her a gift of one of the Freund Great Danes was a not inconsiderable gesture. "I'd give anything if I could take her, Paul," she acknowledged appreciatively.

"Why can't you?"

"I wouldn't know what to do with her, where to keep her—"

"Didn't you say something last night about how you owned a farm?"

"But I'm selling it."

"I can't afford to keep it up."

"Then make it pay for itself. Raise dogs. Look at us. We're starving. Hey, Mom?"

"No, we are not starving," said the old lady with dignity.

"Sure we're not. There's good money in dogs if you only get the breaks."

Ann was intrigued. It wasn't a bad idea, in case she didn't sell the farm. After all, her father had raised setters, and sheep, and Morgan horses. "How would one start off?" she asked curiously.

"With a good bitch."

"And where would I get one?"

"You've got one." He stepped inside the kennel, gave a low whistle, and called Rowena's name. She raised her ears and then pushed and hustled to his side. He said, "Here she is."

"Mr. Freund, don't be absurd. As if I'd really let you—a valuable dog like that!"

"I told you, she's the runt of the litter. But she's out of Wolfgang and Rosalinda and in my opinion that's the finest bloodline in the world. All we need to do is to prove it."

Ann knelt before the dog. "It's proved as far as I'm concerned. She's perfect. Oh, you darling, how can I resist you?"

"Don't!" Paul advised.

"Bring her to me," Mrs. Freund said suddenly. "I want to see her. I have not seen her for many weeks—"

Ann led the dog to the old lady's side. The wrinkled hands moved gently, knowingly, across the smooth rippling muscles. She straightened up. "Yah. She is small yet. But she will grow. Her bones are big for growth."

Ann puffed up with pride. "Then you like her?"

"Yah," said Mrs. Freund softly. "I like her. Very much I like her."

"I predict my dog will turn out to be the greatest Great Dane in the world," Ann declared.

"Maybe," Paul humored her, "you never can tell."

Mrs. Freund nodded slowly. "It's always maybe," said she. "At nine months, it is hard to say what you are going to get. A Great Dane can go many different ways at nine months. It means great care, and sometimes great heartache also. But always great happiness."

"I know," said Ann. A lump came into her throat.

The road between Providence and Boston widened to four straight ribbons of concrete. Christopher Wain let his foot drop closer to the floor board, and the hue motor throbbed beneath the battered hood. The needle crept to ninety. The car surged along the highway.

Christopher relaxed. Speed was a release to a crowded existence over-filled with things that were far from satisfying to his spiritual and emotional needs. At the moment, he was on his way to confer with a group of New England industrialists, whom he would find seated about the mahogany table of a board room, complaining that politicians were running the country into a hole. Eventually, one of the more fretful would look at his watch and say nervously, "Well, Mr. Wain, do we go to jail, or not?"

To which Christopher would reply, "Gentlemen, you knew what you were doing when you got yourselves into this jam. I doubt that the government would find any constructive satisfaction in putting you behind bars, but I do know that they will insist on measures to prevent a repetition of such indiscretions. As an evidence of good faith, I would therefore suggest that you draw up a statement to show that you got faith. With such a plan I may be able to help you. If you are not of good faith, get yourselves another lawyer—"

He was aware of a motorcycle behind him. He started to slow up, but the officer waved him ahead. "Bravo!" Christopher approved. "We have some sporting blood in this corner of the world." His foot went down to the floor plates, and he opened up the cut-out. The car shot forward.

The motorcycle he'd with him to ninety-seven. Christopher leaned forward, adjusted the supercharger, and immediately the Commonwealth of Massachusetts became a gray blur in space. The needle flowed and stopped at a hundred and eighteen. "Confound it!" Christopher muttered, "that mechanic is slipping, the motor isn't tuned up right." He let the engine break the forward motion of the car down to a reasonable eighty before he began to ease on the brakes. The motorcycle roared up and pulled in front. The cop dismounted, kicked the stand under his machine, and swaggered back to the car.

"Where you going in such a hurry?" he demanded, whipping off his goggles before he smiled. "Say, what kind of a car is this, anyway?"

"It hasn't got a name," Christopher told him. "A fellow who used to build airplanes tried to see what he could do with an automobile."

"So he just took the wing off and let it go on that?" The cop touched the car's fender with respect. Then he remembered his official duties. "It was a good race, but don't ever let me catch you pushing her like that again," he cautioned sternly.

"I won't," Christopher promised. (To Be Continued)

DAMASCUS

Garfield grange will meet Aug. 11 when the program will be presented in charge of the lecturer, Mrs. William Greenstein.

Two names were presented for membership recently and will be balloted on at the next meeting. Miss Ruth Martig was elected to become a member.

Letters were read from Seret, Donald Somerville of Parris Island, S. C., and Staff Sergeant Ralph Gist of Australia, both members of Garfield grange.

The program in charge of Mrs. Greenstein consisted of two songs "America" and "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," by the grange; a duet, "Give Me the Roses Now" by Mrs. Frank Mather and daughter Edna; an article "John's Philosophy" by Paul Somerville; talk "What America Means to Me," Olin Shoor, and a discussion on "Safety On The Home Front." The roll call was answered by "Where I Would Like to Go, or What I Would Like to Do For My Vacation If I Could Have One This Year."

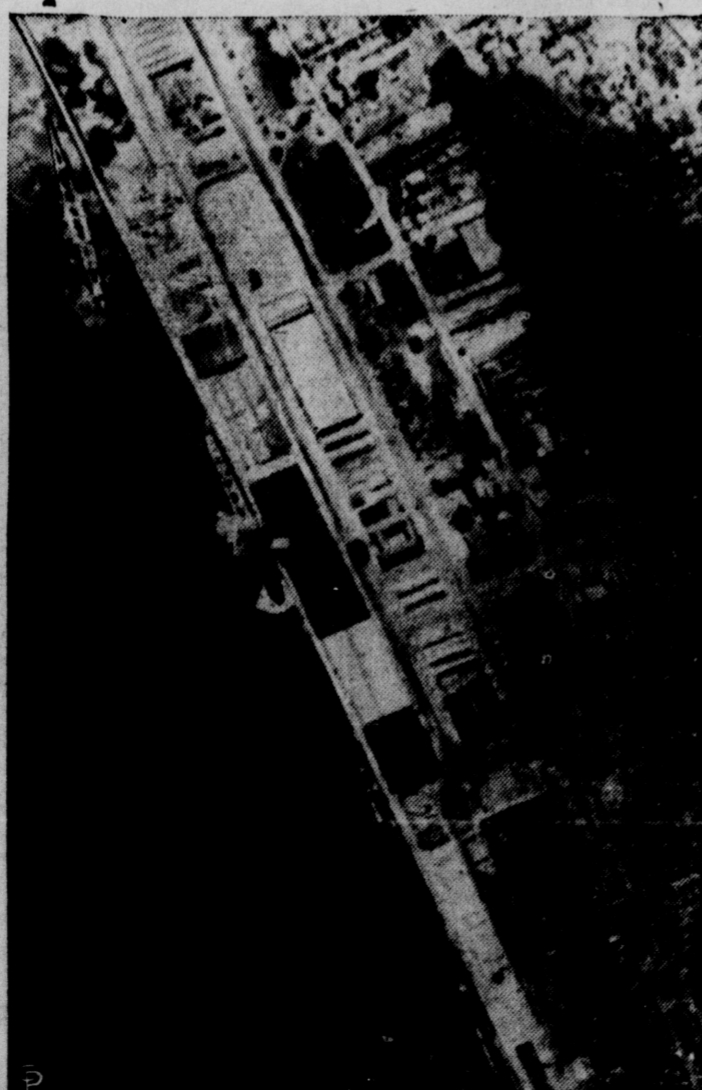

Garfield juveniles transacted routine business when the group met Wednesday evening and it was decided to canvas for new members and urge members to attend regularly.

Games were enjoyed during the lecture hour.

Janet Stanley was elected a new member.

What Makes A Nazi Spy?

BY JACK SPRINGER
AP Features Writer

Hitler is a cheap skate. For proof, ask the Nazi spies dredged up by F. B. I. They spend tireless hours, searching for scraps of information of value to Berlin. In hiding, they plot for days to steal vital, little-known American defense secrets. They run the risk of death or imprisonment. And when their pay comes around—

They are handed wages lower than those of almost any American war worker.

For instance: Erwin Henry de Spretter was a consulting engineer. He was arrested for furnishing the Nazis with detailed specifications and blueprints of American war planes—information that might conceivably be of great value to a desperate Luftwaffe seeking to cope with U. S. air might. De Spretter's reward? A puny $100 from Der Fuehrer.

Waterfront Spy

Ernest Frederick Lehmitz spent days and nights in cheap waterfront saloons, straining his ears for bits of information. Then he smuggled his reports in invisible ink through neutral countries to the Nazis. His work required patience and cunning. But his pay was a pittance—reportedly a mere $1,200 a year.

If Hitler does not pay his spies in kind, just how he does pay off is something of a mystery.

No Path of Glory

It isn't in prestige. The six saboteurs who were captured and executed after they crawled to the beaches of Florida and Long Island were disclaimed by the Nazis—and their paths of glory led only to the graves of Potter's field.

It isn't in glamour and amour, traditional twin inducements for female spies. According to popular theory, the typical agent is a languid, lissome Mata Hari, already for love—and secrets. But Hitler does not afford his spies those comforts. Nazi women caught by the F. B. I. have been singularly unlovely—and their glamour has been confined mostly to scrubbing floors, making beds in dingy rooming

DECLARE PRESIDENT WON'T RUN AGAIN

Senators Nye and Smith Say Roosevelt Won't Try For Fourth Term

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Two outspoken U. S. senators—a Republican and a Democrat—voiced belief today President Roosevelt might not seek or accept nomination for a fourth term.

Senator Nye (R-ND) asserted that if the President "finds there's a large chance of his being whipped," he will step aside.

"And," Nye told a reporter, "if he looks around enough, he'll find just that."

Senator Smith (D-SC) declared in another interview that "Roosevelt won't win the nomination even if he should seek it, and by convention time, I think he'll be convinced of that."

"If he should be able to swing the nomination," Smith declared, "he'd be beaten for re-election, regardless of whether the war is in progress."

Nye said the principal job of his own party was to find a man behind whom "the party and the American people can unite."

Nye asserted that congressmen returning in September after their summer recess and conversations with their constituents, "will have more definite ideas than now as to the type of candidate the people will follow."

Meanwhile it developed that the Republican party's post-war advisory council has fixed on Sept. 6 and 7, or thereabouts, for its first full meeting to consider suggestions for a peace preservation plank in the 1944 platform.

The council will convene in the Midwest at a place still to be selected. Mackinac Island, Mich., and Lake Geneva, Wis., had been considered but rejected.

Moving of Dormitories At Ravenna Contemplated

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Dormitories built in 1940 for women workers at the Ravenna ordnance plant may be moved to another site.

Officials, noting that the dormitories had not been filled, said other new housing facilities had met requirements of all the workers whose numbers are being reduced as a result of schedule revisions. They added that the women's quarters are too far from the plant and lack necessary facilities.

Saying privately that housing in the area actually exceeded requirements unforeseen before the war, the officials said the National Housing agency had considered transferring the dormitories to Springfield, O. This plan was abandoned and another site probably will be selected. The buildings are demountable and can be moved easily.

NURSES' TRAINING DRIVE LAUNCHED

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The job of recruiting 100,000 young women for nursing duties at home and abroad was started today by the Public Health service and Congress number one nursing fan, Rep. Frances P. Bolton (R-Ohio).

It will be no easy task to fill the ranks of the United States cadet nurse corps, Mrs. Bolton said, because of the competition of such other women's activities as the WAACS, the WAVES, the SPARS and the Marines.

"But I believe we will reach our goal," she said. "We really have something to offer: An opportunity to serve humanity during this terrible war and to learn a profession that will be of lifetime value."

Training of nurses under the program will be handled in hospitals and nursing schools and students must agree to remain available for the military or essential civilian nursing service for the duration.

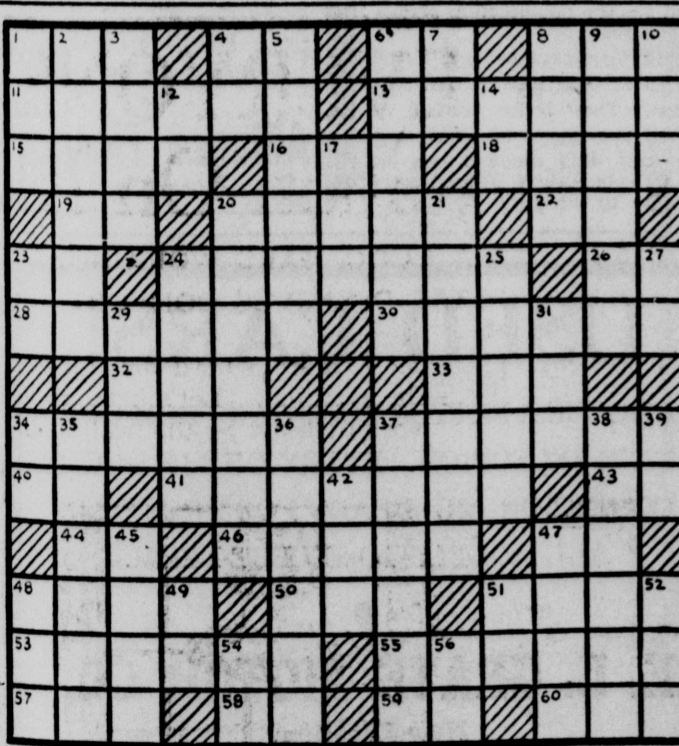

Rail Plan O. K. Sought

CANTON, July 17.—Baltimore and Ohio railroad officials said passenger service between Wheeling and Akron, via Massillon, would be resumed if the Office of Defense Transportation at Washington approved the plan.

Shutouts Becoming A Habit With Class A Softball Teams

BOMBERS BLANK FURNACES WHILE RECS DROP BARS

Run Up 11 to 0 Tally, While Recreations Manage to Win 3 to 0

They are getting to be a habit—those Class A softball league shutouts.

Two more clubs were blanked in tilts at the park last night, the Bombers pasting the Electric Furnaces 11 to 0 and the Recreations stopping the Gold Bars 4 to 0.

The Bombers had an easy time winning from the Furnaces, piling up a total of 13 hits to the losers' three. Bennett tossed for the Bombers.

With the Recreations, however, it was a different story. The game was closely fought, with the Recs bunching their hits in the fifth inning for a four-run tally.

HAMBLETONIAN FAVORITE - By Sords

Sewell's Cross-eyed Curve Makes Him Pitching Star

Associated Press Sports Writer

There was that tune out of Tin Pan Alley a while back about "The Dipsy Doodle That Gets in Your Hair," and National League batters, who've been breaking their backs on Rip Sewell's new Sunday pitch this season, tell you the guy who wrote this little number didn't know half of it.

This probably is the funniest dipsy-doo slant since Wes Ferrell presented his nuthin' ball. It's a little thing Sewell cooked up in his spare time and finally perfected, and since he discovered the "Dodo," the Pittsburgh Pirates' twirler has become the leading elbow in the National league. At the moment, he has 13 wins, including a 9-5 job over the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday.

One batter described the new toss as a cross between a parachute jump and a yo-yo, which gives you a rough idea. It's a kind of cross-eyed curve that breaks up and down instead of side to side. Rip throws it without any more steam than you'll find in a bowl of mush.

It was the subject of almost as much gassing and grousing at the all-star get-together in Philadelphia as the Brooklyn "rhubarb."

Medwick Pleased

Bobo Newsom has agreed to report to the Browns to pitch Sunday, just as everyone expected he would, even when he was howling loudest about the injustice of it all. Ducky Medwick, too, thinks his sale to the Giants might be a good thing, on account of it'll get him out of Brooklyn. And the Bums, meanwhile, blew a 3-2 decision to the Boston Braves yesterday.

The clan that gathered in Philly early this week told about the time Rip served the dipsy-doo up to Dom Dallessandro, the short Chicago gardener who is built something like a fire hydrant. Dom had two strikes on him and watched this thing coming up overhead, figuring it was a pitch that got away from Rip. It hovered up there for a moment, then dropped over and the lumps had to call strike three. Needless to say, Dom called it something else.

"I," he roared at Rip, "have a good mind to come out there with this bat and taunt on your noggin for a while."

Yesterday's pirate win, coupled with the Dodger defeat, left Pittsburgh only 3½ games out of second place. The Brooklyn were held to five hits by Nate Andrews. Johnny McCarthy, who used to be a Dodger, chipped in with a triple that broke up the ball game.

These were the only tussles in the National league, while in the American, the New York Yankees nipped the Athletics 6-5 on Frankie Crosetti's eighth-inning run-making single. Since the Boston Red Sox knocked off the Washington Senators 4-1 behind Oscar Judd's five-hit hurling, this boosted the Yanks' league lead to 5½ games and dropped the Nats into third place, back of the idle Detroit Tigers.

In the only other game, the St. Louis Browns countered for only four hits, but bunched three of them in the first inning to nose out the Cleveland Indians, 4-3.

NEW YORK, July 17.—A couple of weeks ago Branch Rickey was defending the Giants—and incidentally his own—failure to buy certain ball players by saying that during the winter bartering season both clubs were interested only in the kind of athletes who could help win a pennant.... the Giants, he added, might change their attitude and show some interest in candidates for a "sixth or seventh-place team.... Wonder if he had Ducky Medwick in mind all the time?... But somehow we can't see the Newsom and Medwick deals helping the Dodgers along towards the flag—not this year.

TRIBE IN SEVENTH PLACE AFTER LOSS

(By Associated Press)

ST. LOUIS, July 17.—The St. Louis Browns had Cleveland Indians Manager Lou Boudreau wondering today about his mound strategy after they trumped the Tribe's ace, Al Smith, in the first inning debacle of a night game in which two relief hurlers held the Browns to one hit in eight and two-thirds innings.

The Browns won last night's contest 4 to 3 after Relief Hurler Mike Nymk pitched no-hit ball for five and two-thirds innings and fanned seven batters. The right-hander took over after Smith allowed three runs on three hits and as many walks. St. Louis tallied its fourth marker when Nymk forced Harold Clift to hit into a double play, parking Mark Christman.

The deciding run could have been avoided had Second Baseman Ray Mack tagged Mike Kreevich racing to second. Instead, he tossed to Mike Rocco who threw to Boudreau to double Kreevich. The Tribe plot then tossed to first to get Clift, but Christman had scored by then. Smith pitched to six batters in the hectic first inning without retiring any of them.

Allie Reynolds seeks his fourth mound victory today in the third game of the series. Denny Galehouse will pitch for the Browns.

Bucks Football Chances Thin As Dime

BY FRITZ HOWELL

AP Features

COLUMBUS — Compared with the 1942 bucks—who looked like a million bucks in winning the Western conference and National football championships — Ohio State University's 1943 prospects appear as thin as a dime.

After tucking away the two titles last fall, Coach Paul E. Brown looked over his surviving talent and declared:

"For 1943 we have the makings of one of the greatest football teams this country has ever seen."

He based his statement on the fact he was losing only two starters by graduation; that 39 of the squad of 42 would be ready to go again; and that some of the finest freshmen talent ever produced was on hand to plug the gaps—any. Talent was three or four-deep, everywhere.

Then came the draft and enlistments.

"Precision Paul" counted noses again and mid-way through the Summer practice grind he found:

Thirty-nine freshmen, about 30 of them only 17 years old, but with more than half of them due to register for the draft by September;

A starting tackle and three substitutes slated for tackle, quarterback and center berths, deferred from selective service because of such things as varicose veins, asthma and deafness.

A substitute end who will be back because he's married and has a three-year-old child and

Ohio State has no naval or marine units on the campus—the only service groups for whom football has been approved.

What does Coach Brown, who has lost only two games in his two seasons in the big time after graduating from the high school ranks, think of this wartime football?

"It is one of the most interesting experiments we've ever run into," he declares. "When I was coaching at Massillon High we had 17-year-old kids on our junior high teams. Now we are using the 17-year-olds on the varsity in the toughest league in the country."

"Our squad, in weight, is about 22 pounds per man under last season's, but we have some speed, especially in running to the left. If we can hang on to the machine of the majority of the youngsters we now have, and can pick up a few more good freshmen in September, we'll get along."

57 Freshmen Turned Out

Brown started the Summer grind with 57 freshmen, but already has lost 18 with more due to don the khaki soon.

"We are at a disadvantage, of course, but we'll be in there trying," says Brown. "After all, football is rather minor these days."

The Bucks meet Iowa Seahawks, Missouri, Great Lakes, Purdue, Northwestern, Indiana, Pittsburgh, Illinois and Michigan on consecutive weekends. Pretty tough for a batch of 17-year-olds!

Blood Goes To The Dogs

AP Features

ORLANDO, Fla.—Blood donors of dogdom.

That's the term applied by more than 1,000 dog owners in Florida to the six giant racing greyhounds owned by the Ruble Dog hospital here.

About seven years ago kennel operators of a near-by racing dog track found that Rusty, 70 pound greyhound, was consistently losing races. The customers didn't like it, and neither did his owners. They decided to get rid of Rusty the humane way.

Dr. Jerry Ruble, president of the Southern Veterinarian Medical association, heard about the desire of Rusty's owners to dispose of him. He asked for Rusty, received him, and thus began the blood donor club of dogdom.

In the past seven years, Rusty has given nearly two barrels of blood to puppies whose blood had been sucked away by the dreaded hookworm that is the scourge of dogs in the South.

"Puppies two to eight weeks old are very susceptible to hookworm," Dr. Ruble explains. "When they get the disease, the hookworm sucks up blood like a sponge. The puppy becomes weak and anemic—and often dies. It is almost fatal in this weakened condition to administer a strong hookworm medicine."

After a pint of rich blood from Rusty, the puppies are as frisky as ever. Then strong hookworm medicine can be administered.

Rusty has been followed by five other racing greyhounds. In the last six years, as blood donors, these canines have given more than 1,800 quarts of blood in transfusions, and have actually saved the lives of more than 1,000 dogs in Florida which might otherwise have died, Dr. Ruble asserts.

With current production of warplanes passing the 6,000-a-month mark, it is recalled that only one American-made airplane reached the fighting front in the first year of the last war.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

ry—which wasn't even dreamed of in World War I. Looking back at the last conflict, I recall turning my back on a British general and leaving the room, because he made a bitterly derogatory remark about a president of the United States. On the other hand, as an American correspondent at British general headquarters in France I shall not soon forget the consternation caused when some American officers, fresh from the United States with newly arrived troops, announced in so many words that they knew how to make war and didn't want any advice from the British.

That sort of thing went on, with Americans, British, French and other allies all contributing their share to the mess. The feeling ran from the lowest to the highest places, even resulting in shocking jealousies as to which ally should have supreme command in combined operations.

And the civilian populations took a hand in it. Americans got mad because Britons called "elevators" "lifts," doggone it, and the English made snooty remarks about that awful Yankee nasal twang.

WHAT a change now! We are swapping our resources and our hospitality. There's no limit to the exchange; the lid is off. On the battlefronts it's share and share alike, and the greatest soldiers of the country are happy to subordinate themselves to the command of a colleague from another nation—if that's best for the cause.

The reason for this remarkable change? Well, let's not get sentimental but just call it a horse-sense truce. Perhaps the most potent factor in drawing us together was the mortal danger the Allies were in. We found ourselves fighting for our very survival against a barbaric enemy who had the initial advantage. Then, too, we have been smart enough to profit by the mistakes and blunders of the last war.

Never before has there been such Allied cooperation, and consequent coordination of effort, in major military and naval operations. Not only is there coordination of the three fighting arms—air, land and sea—among the forces of the individual nations, but this coordination extends to the combined Allied forces. That is to say, all the services of each country in a given theater are at the call of the commander-in-chief, to intermingle as he chooses. It's one for all for one.

It was that willing unity which gave the Allies their victory in North Africa. It's the mainspring of that greatest of all amphibious operations which is being carried out in Sicily.

THE fair progeny of this cooperation are many. One of the most striking developments of the war is the specialized training of the various branches like the commandos and paratroops—in many cases a joint effort. History never has seen such well prepared forces go into battle as now are taking the field.

Many of the American, English, Canadian and French soldiers who fought their way up the beaches of Sicily from the landing barges, underwent months—and some of them years—of the terrific training which was far more strenuous than the actual battle experiences. They not only are physically perfect, but they know their jobs the way a pianist knows his keys. Thousands of these specialists received their training in an Allied camp.

The antithesis of this cooperation and coordination is the Axis imbroglio in Sicily. There Italians in some places are surrendering rather than fight for the hated Boche, and the Nazis are reported shooting their own allies.

HOG MARKETING
WASHINGTON, July 17.—Because of the feed shortage, the War Food administration is planning to appeal to farmers to start marketing hogs at weights averaging between 30 and 40 pounds lighter than usual, beginning Sept. 1.

The WFA has concluded that the best way to bring reduced feed supplies into line with the livestock demand is to send hogs to markets at weights averaging about 260 pounds. Now the average is between 250 and 260. In a year, several hundred million bushels of corn thus could be diverted from hogs to other livestock.

RAF Smashes At Italian Transportation System; Munich Attacked

struck at dusk yesterday to leave great fires burning in that control point for all rail traffic to the north.

The raid was made at the cost of one bomber and protected by a thick blanket of Allied fighters.

The dusk attack followed up night blows by the RAF which cut a path of ruin from northern Italy to the low countries.

In releasing additional information on the Thursday night raids over northern Italy, the air ministry said the attacks were on electrical nerve centers and were closely tied up with the battle of Sicily in crippling the Italian railway system. Three of the four transporters hit were near Bologna, rail center through which runs the Brenner Pass line from Munich over which reinforcements from Germany must travel.

The Vichy radio, describing the Thursday night raids, said casualties in an eastern French town, which was presumed here to be Montbeliard were 300 dead and 500 injured.

AKRON, July 17.—War workers in the rubber capital proved the worth of Share-the-Ride programs today and kept airplane and rubber production normal as a three-day strike of 400 CIO transport workers continued to tie-up mass transportation.

Absenteeism showed only slight increases at war plants, where the year-old transportation arrangements among workers moved easily into fuller operation and substituted for the paralyzed public transportation facilities in Akron, Barberton and Cuyahoga Falls.

A Goodyear Aircraft Corp. spokesman said the Share-the-Ride program was so well organized at the plants that "we hardly realized there was a transportation strike."

Officials at Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. and E. F. Goodrich Co. reported their plants were operating at near normal. The aircraft plants, located seven and a half miles from downtown Akron, said absenteeism yesterday was only one and a half per cent above normal, and three per cent above normal on the first day of the unexpected walkout.

Fail To Reach Agreement
Sixty per cent of Summit county's 101,062 motorists possess B or C gasoline ration books. The Office of Price Administration granted emergency gasoline rations of two gallons daily to Summit county "A" book holders for the duration of the strike. Clinton M. Fiske, OPA district director at Cleveland, said B and C card holders able to show need for more gasoline, could get additional rations.

A back-to-work move among bus and streetcar operators yesterday failed despite appeals from the union's international president, Michael J. Quill of New York. Fewer than half of the operators attended and a vote could not be taken, local president, William H. Wright said.

"You're not going to get any place by striking," Quill declared. "Under no consideration can we in the CIO tolerate a strike in war time."

A WLB panel had recommended increased overtime pay by establishing a basic work week of 42 1/2 hours with time and a half over that. The union sought full pay for all hours over 40.

At Canton the number of CIO steelworkers involved in a stoppage in the Timken Roller Bearing Co.'s steel mill grew to 520 when about 100 workers in the piercing mill and machine shop joined the walkout which began Tuesday in the rolling mill department.

Col. J. H. Maione, labor chief of the Army's Fifth Service command, came to Canton yesterday at the request of Federal Conciliator A. T. Pinkney. He said he would remain until "the strike is settled."

Pinkney said unionists were protesting changes in work schedules on the grounds some workers would be down-graded and others put out of jobs. A company spokesman said the company was attempting a gradual change-over to the 48-hour week.
